Investment Manager Report

In April, Norron Sustainable Equity yielded a return of 0.7 percent, while the VINX Benchmark Cap Net Index and Carnegie Nordic Small Cap saw increases of 1.5 percent and 1.0 percent, respectively. The reporting season commenced during the month, resulting in significant movements beneath the surface. AstraZeneca and ABB, for instance, surpassed analysts' expectations and, along with Nordic Semiconductor, constituted the primary contributors to the fund's performance. Conversely, we observed weaker performance in ChemoMetec, Tomra, and Bravida, with the latter experiencing a decline following suspicions of overbilling. In response to the suspicions, Bravida initiated an investigation which was unveiled at the end of April, revealing deliberate overbilling within a particular department. However, no evidence in the investigation suggests intentional overbilling in any other department. We have asked questions to the company and are closely monitoring developments.

In terms of fund-specific news, we divested from Envipco due to valuation concerns. The company has shown strong operational performance since our initial investment in early 2021, which has also been reflected in its stock performance. Additionally, we have taken a new position in the Norwegian salmon farming company MOWI, where we believe the valuation is at an attractive level, while the company's climate-friendly production of nutritious food also contributes to a healthier society.

Regarding the fund's sustainability themes, Healthy & prosperous societies contributed the most (1.4 percentage points), led by AstraZeneca, Novo Nordisk, and Medicover. This theme constituted an average weight of 35 percent of the fund. Sustainable cities & infrastructure, on the other hand, had the weakest contribution (-0.8 percentage points) with a weight of 30 percent of the fund, primarily due to the negative performance of Bravida.

EU Taxonomy Explanation

The EU taxonomy is a classification framework that determines whether a specific economic activity is environmentally sustainable. The purpose of the framework is to accelerate the transition towards a more sustainable economy. The taxonomy framework currently includes six environmental objectives, which are: 1. Climate change mitigation, 2. Climate change adaptation, 3. Sustainable use and protection of water and marine resources, 4. Transition to a circular economy, 5. Pollution prevention and control, and 6. Protection and restoration of biodiversity ecosystems. For an economic activity to be considered environmentally sustainable ("aligned"), it must significantly contribute to one of the above environmental objectives. The activity must also not cause significant harm to any of the other objectives. Additionally, the company must meet certain social minimum safeguards.

The taxonomy framework is an important tool for Norron in our assessment of sustainable investments. The fund's alignment indicates the proportion of the fund's investments that meet the established criteria for environmental sustainability according to the EU taxonomy regulation. The table also shows whether these activities are classified as "green", enabling, or transitional activities. For complete taxonomy data, we refer to the fund's sustainability report available on Norron's website, and Norron SICAV's annual report.

Sustainability Data Explanation

Norron invests towards the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and Agenda 2030. For an investment to be considered sustainable, it must contribute to one of the SDGs as well as to one of Norron's sustainable investment objectives. The objectives are as follows: Climate & environment, Healthy & prosperous societies, Innovative & sustainable solutions, Sustainable cities & infrastructure, and Sustainable finance. Sustainable investments must also meet minimum social safeguards and must not cause significant harm on sustainability factors. The table on page one reports the fund's weighted average proportion of sustainable investments for the previous year.

Norron has also established three entity level sustainability goals extending to 2040, with sub-targets set for 2026. These goals state that by 2040, 100% of portfolio companies should 1) set climate goals validated by the Science Based Targets initiative, 2) sign the UN Global Compact, and 3) disclose material sustainability risks. The table on page one shows how the fund contributed (weighted average) to Norron's sustainability goals in the previous year.
